

LEIGHTON ON THE WITNESS STAND

ACKNOWLEDGED HE HIMSELF WROTE THE CHECK AND SIGNED IT "HARRY BROWN."

GAVE AS HIS REASON THAT HE WISHED TO BOOST THE CASH ACCOUNT OF THE BANK BUT HAD NO IN- TENTION TO DEFRAUD.

ALL THE TESTIMONY IS IN AND CASE IS READY FOR ARGUMENT

Following the statement of the prosecutor that he would rest the case, Attorney Ridenour, after the recess in a trial yesterday afternoon, filed and read a motion before the court asking that the jury be directed to return a verdict for the defense on the grounds that the state had failed to prove its intent on the part of the prisoner to defraud, and that the check in question was not uttered or cashed since it had never left possession of the banker or bank.

After careful study, the court overruled the motion holding that proof had been offered that the forgery was intended.

Not a witness had been subpoenaed to the defense, but on taking up the case Receiver George H. Quail was the first witness called on a stand. The examination brought out nothing new than that which has been noted in the recital of his testimony in chief.

There was a hush following Attorney Ridenour's call of the next witness, and pushing his chair slowly on him, the defendant arose and is sworn by deputy clerk Breese. Leighton took the stand with apparent ease and showed no concern or nervousness. Mr. Ridenour had already placed his client before the jury as a witness in his own behalf for the purpose of adding to his intention that no intent at fraud had been made by defendant. After a few moments the attorney slowly pronounced three or four questions having for their answers the denials of defendant to any intent criminally.

But the move of the clever attorney as just what the prosecutor had wanted. The prosecutor was powerless to force the defendant on the stand, but once there he had the right after cross-examination to put him under a sweat-box. And he did.

USED MONEY FOR BANK

ut Never Turned It Over to the Receiver of That Institution.

During the cross-examination of Leighton, Mr. Klinger brought up the matter of Leighton, accompanied by attorney B. F. Welty, having gone to Toledo, two days after the failure of the bank and secured from J. N. Dewey the sum of $10,000 to aid the bank in its troubles.

The witness admitted going to Toledo and in getting the money. Mr. Klinger asked if it were not a fact that Mr. Dewey had made out a check for the amount payable to the Lima Savings Bank & Trust company, but at Leighton had asked that he change this, and did finally secure the funds himself. The witness denied asking his father-in-law to change the style of the check, but admitted he secured the funds. He said he had secured them in paying off certain liabilities of the bank, held by the Commercial and Ohio National. He would not account for all the ten thousand, and finally said he had returned about $3,500 of the money to Mr. Dewey.

HOW HE BOUGHT STOCK.

History of Purchases Made by Leighton of Others' Holdings.

The prosecutor went into the matter of Leighton's having made certain purchases of the capital stock of the bank from one, B. F. Welty. Leighton said he did purchase it. "Did you pay for it?" asked the prosecutor. "Yes, sir." "How did you pay it?" "I wrote my check for it." "But did Welty get any money?" "Well," replied the banker, "my account was charged with the $400 and Welty's account credited with that sum."

The same story was recited in the purchase of stock from others, but in one instance Leighton said he had taken up a draft for some one in payment for stock.

TO SIGN THE STATEMENT MADE OUT TO THE COUNTY AUDITOR.

Bringing up the matter of having listed the Brown check as cash in his return of the statement of the bank's condition to the county auditor, Leighton claimed he had never asked Cashier Churchill to sign the statement. He said he had made out and signed the statement from data given him by Churchill, however, but had never taken the trouble to investigate it. "I knew Mr. Churchill to be an honest man, and never questioned him," added the witness.

For an hour and a half he kept asking questions at the witness going into the many details of the transaction of the bank, and bringing out a number of new phases in the conduct of the Lima Savings & Trust company.

ACKNOWLEDGED THE CHECK

Stating That He Himself Had Made It Out and Signed the Name.

Under a fusillade of questions, Attorney Klinger brought out a straightforward acknowledgment from the banker that he had drawn the check on the Security Trust company, of Toledo; had himself signed and endorsed it. That he did this solely for the purpose of boosting the supposed cash showing of the bank, but that he did not do it with any intent to defraud but merely as Leighton put it as "personal pride" for the showing of the bank's business.

Question after question was put along these lines, and then the prosecutor went into the matter of Leighton's ledger accounts. The banker in answering direct queries as to whether he had ever secured funds from former County Treasurer Gensel, acknowledged he had. He acknowledged the card crediting him with $10,000 in the savings department of his bank, was in fact representative of the loan made him by Gensel. He said he held it as a "trustee" but would not or could not explain a "trustee" for whom. Whether he was Gensel's trustee, or the bank's trustee, he could not remember.

He claimed that sum had been paid back in installments, and had gone through him. In explaining or trying to explain himself as a trustee in the matter he finally put it in his own words by saying he was a "go-between."

"Did you ever turn this sum over to Receiver Quail?"

"No, sir," exclaimed the witness, "I took charge of it as the president of the Bank, and paid off certain claims."

LONG DELAY.

Resulted This Morning and Only Short Session Held.

There was a long delay occasioned by attorneys for the defense outlining between themselves the procedure of the case this morning, and it was ten o'clock before court was announced in session.

The room was well filled, as interest in what the defense expected to show in refutation of the evidence brought out by the state, was great. During the wait, the attorneys for the state had sent out for three bankers, all of whom had relations with the defendant about the time of the failure of the bank, or a few days later.

The defense had secured these three men in an endeavor to show that Leighton, after securing the $10,000 from his father-in-law in Toledo following the close of the bank, had taken this amount and applied it to liabilities of the bank. By this act, the defense put before the jury the fact that the "Harry Brown" check had been made good, and Leighton should receive credit for the money paid out by him at that time, which if allowed would not show him as having an overdraw and interpreted as the defense wished to have it, would show that Leighton there by took up the check and proved he had no intent to defraud and did not defraud.

THE BANK WITNESSES

Tell of Transactions Four Days After Naming of the Custodian.

Cashier L. H. Kibby, of the Ohio National Bank, was the first witness called by the defense. Mr. Kibby was asked concerning any relations he had with Leighton after the date of October 27, to which date only the prosecution had carried its evidence regarding Leighton overdraft.

Mr. Kibby outlined the notes held by his bank against the South Side institution as follows:

One for $4,000 dated April 7, 1903.

One for $2,000 dated June 9, 1903.

One for $1,000 dated July 27, 1904.

Mr. Kibby stated that on October 31st, Mr. Leighton accompanied by B. F. Welty and J. N. Dewey, paid off these notes, on which there was due at that time the gross sum of $4,226.14. Mr. Kibby stated the collateral was then turned over to Mr. Leighton. When asked if he knew why Leighton had wished to pay off these liabilities, Mr. Kibby stated they had requested payment, but that as they held security in the sum of $9,355.50, it was a good business move to secure the collateral in return.

The prosecutor on cross examination attempted to show that Leighton had hurried to take up this paper because of the fact that the bank had learned that some of the notes, or at least one which they held, had been paid by the maker, but the latter had paid only a "copy" and not the original held by the Ohio National, and that Leighton feared these developments would go against him.

Mr. Halfhill on cross examination showed that only one such note and that for but $100 had been paid and the maker received a copy instead of the original.

C. S. Baxter, of the Commercial bank, was next called, and testified that on October 31st, Leighton with Welty and Peter Mell had paid off a dishonored New York draft in the sum of $400 held by his bank. On cross examination the prosecutor brought out that Leighton had been threatened with arrest if the draft was not made good, and that to temporarily make it good he had given the Commercial bank a note signed by himself, Mell and Welty, and that it was this note which Leighton paid off on the 31st.

C. H. East, of the Lima Trust company, testified to having received payment from Leighton et al. on October 31st, of notes in the sum of $1,000 held by his company against the South Side institution.

LEIGHTON AGAIN CALLED.

Put on to Show That He Had Turned the Collateral Over to Custodian.

The defendant, Mr. Leighton, was next put on the stand by the attorneys for the defense to prove that he had turned over the collateral received by payment of the claims at the two banks mentioned, to George H. Quail, as custodian of the defunct bank.

After securing this statement from the witness, he was turned over to the attorneys for the defense, who took up the matter of bank affairs again, and for an hour put the witness through a series of "cross" questions which greatly irritated the prisoner, until he finally resented the questions asked. He declared to Klinger that he would not let him put words in his mouth.

Mr. Klinger was frequently interrupted by attorneys for the defense who claimed he was proceeding outside his limits. Klinger tried to prove that Leighton had the money secured on the bank, and tried to prove that the prisoner had frequently taken money from the bank's strong box and replaced it with worthless notes.

Leighton declared he had always given collateral security for all loans. When asked what kind, he said the capital stock of the bank. He was asked how much of this he owned, and he merely replied the books would show. He evaded all questions, and got badly mixed up in a number of answers. He was still in the hands of the state at the noon recess.

DEFENSE RESTED.

Following a Short Re-Examination of Receiver, Quail.

At the afternoon session of court, the defense called its last witness in a re-call of Receiver George H. Quail. Attempt was made to show that Leighton never received a penny in money for any of the many notes which he made against himself. The defense also showed that what notes were made by him had attached to them collateral security, save for one of $10,400. This security the witness said consisted of 250 shares of the capital stock of the Sandusky Southwestern railway; of the capital stock of the bank, and other stock companies.

The prosecutor on cross examination attempted to show that though the par value of the stock so attached was $100 per share, its true value was worthless. The court sustained objection of defense as to any statement from witness as to the real value of the stock in question, leaving that to the jury to determine.

After finishing with Mr. Quail, Mr. Halfhill announced at two o'clock that the defense would rest.

THE REBUTTAL

First Witness Called Was Ex-County Treasurer Gensel.

In rebuttal, Prosecutor Klinger called James W. Gensel, former county treasurer, as his first witness.

"Did you do any business with the Lima Savings Bank and Trust company while you were treasurer?" was asked.

"Yes, sir."

"With what funds?"

"My own funds," came the reply.

"Were they not the county's funds?"

"They were not."

"How did you have the funds deposited there?"

"On a certificate of deposit."

On cross examination Mr. Halfhill went into the matter of funds in question. He asked where he got them, and it was objected to. When asked how much money he had deposited with the bank, Mr. Gensel stated about $10,000.

"Get any interest on it?" asked Mr. Halfhill.

"Five per cent," answered the witness.

"Do you say that between the dates of September, 1900, and September, 1904, you had your own funds of that amount?"

"Yes, sir."

Mr. Halfhill then went into the question as to how much taxes the treasurer had paid, but was stopped, and the witness allowed to refuse any further question on that line.

As the NEWS goes to press, the state has recalled Cashier Churchill. All the testimony will probably be in before the adjournment this evening, and it will probably result in a postponement until Monday when the argument will be made. At the present outlook the jury should have the case for deliberation by Monday evening.

SHINGLES

Sparks alighting among the loose shingles of her house caused Mrs. Dunn, of 645 north Jackson street, to call out both central and north departments yesterday afternoon. The chemical apparatus was used and no damage resulted.

DEFEAT

Was Lima Teams Portion.

MARYSVILLE BEATS LIMA GIRLS BY SMALL MARGIN.

In a fast and snappy game at the Auditorium last night the girls' basketball team from Marysville succeeded in administering a defeat to the Lima team, but although beaten Lima has just reason to be proud of her team. It was the first game ever played by them and the work was the fastest and best ever shown by a girl team in Lima. With a little more practice the home team can give any of the teams in the state a run for the money and in exhibitions of passing they showed the result of hard and careful coaching. Lineup:

Marysville. Lima

Edna Galoway R. F. Laura McLaughlin right forward

Edna Galoway Laura McLaughlin left forward

Josephine Wilkins Forest Ireland center

Nan Stevenson Margaret Thompson tight guard

Marie Weidman Rose Agertier left guard

Nell McElroy Gladys Baxter Final score, Marysville, 5; Lima, 2.

PIQUA WINS.

While Marysville was beating Lima, Piqua was also doing the same to the local High School boys. Shaw was forced to retire from the game during the first half and the team was weakened perceptibly by his absence. Driver and Simpson did the best work for the home team, but Piqua was too clever for them. Score, Lima, 22; Piqua, 53.

CATCH

Made By the Police After a Long Chase.

THAT MAY PROVE TO BE A GOOD ONE—MAN CLAIMING TO BE AGENT FOR SEVERAL MAGAZINES TRIES TO EVADE CLUTCHES OF OFFICERS.

After a long chase through the greater part of South Lima and with the whole day force of the police department on his trail John P. Boyd succeeded in evading the officers for over an hour this morning and only after a hard sprint was he captured by Sergt. Armstrong, at the crossing of the C. H. & D. and L. E. & W. The department first received word of him from a south side saloon where he tried to sell a pocketbook for the price of a few drinks and word to the effect that he had several blank checks in his possession led the officers to believe he might prove to be a good catch. Officer Schieffelin first started to look him up but the fugitive was too fast and later the entire day force was summoned up and taken over. For over an hour Boyd led them all a merry chase and only after a hard sprint of two hundred yards Sergt. Armstrong caught up with him. Boyd's desire to evade the officers leads them to believe that he has reasons in not caring to meet them. He claimed to be the agent for several magazines and when seen by the NEWS and asked what magazines in particular he represented he replied "All the standard dollar magazines," but would name none in particular. A big bunch of blank receipts and a bundle of cloth samples which he claimed were samples of premiums given to subscribers were found in his possession and as inquiry among local booksellers resulted in the information that they knew of no magazines who gave premiums of this kind it may be possible that a few households of the city have been defrauded of the price of a years subscription to his books.

Other Police News.

Michael Glego, a tramp who claims he walked from Dayton to Lima and was in quest of work was given orders to leave the city by the Mayor.

John Purrell, drunk and disorderly drew one dollar and costs.

Followed Women.

Two vagrants, giving the names of Joseph Murphy and Harry Roberts, were arrested on complaint of some women last evening. The women claimed that the two men were following them and the officers brought them in. No body appeared to prosecute this morning and they will probably be given a chance to leave town.

FIRE BOYS.

William Wilcox, of the central department, has become separated from the hirsute adornment which formerly adorned his upper lip; in other words William has had his mustache shaved off. Whether he is trying to improve his appearance or it is the result of an election bet we do not know, but none at all is better than a poor one.

The new dog store opened up some weeks ago has a competitor in their business in Lee Higgins, assistant captain at central. Higgins has disposed of two litters of pups in the last week and any body either desiring a dog or wanting to get rid of one should see him. He has at present a howler, lantern jawed, curly tailed pup, described by him as being an Irish setter and anybody wanting him can have him.

THE WELL KNOWN SPECIALIST.
FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. D., WILL SEND HIS BOOK "AND $2.50 WORTH OF HIS PERSONAL TREATMENT FREE TO ANY READER."

*****

There never was a better opportunity for persons suffering from diseases of the heart, liver, stomach and kidneys to test free a remarkably successful treatment for these disorders.

Mr. Miles is known to be a leading specialist in these diseases and his liberal offer is certainly worthy of serious consideration by every afflicted reader. This opportunity may never occur again.

His system of Personal Treatment is thoroughly scientific and immensely superior to other methods. It includes several new remedies carefully selected to suit each individual case and is the final result of twenty-five years of very extensive research and great success in treating these diseases.

Each treatment consists of a curative elixir, tonic tablets, eliminating pills and usually a plaster. Extensive statistics clearly demonstrate that Dr. Miles Personal Treatment is at least three times as successful as the usual treatment of physicians or general remedies sold at the stores.

Col. E. B. Spillman, of the 9th United States Regulars, located at San Diego, Cal., says: "Dr. Miles' Special Treatment has worked wonders in my son's case when all else failed. I had employed the best medical talent and had spent $2,000 in doing so. I believe he is a wonderful specialist. I consider it my duty to recommend him." "For years I had severe trouble with my stomach, head, neuralgia, shaking spells and drooping. Your treatment entirely cured me."

Mr. Julius Keister, of 550 Michigan avenue, Chicago, testifies that Dr. Miles cured him after ten able physicians had failed. Mrs. R. Trimmer, of Greenspring, Pa., was cured after many physicians had pronounced her case "hopeless."

As all afflicted readers may have his book and $2.50 worth of treatment especially adapted to their case free, we would advise them to send for it before it is too late. Address: Dr. Franklin Miles, Dept. G, 719 to 729 Main street, Elkhart, Indiana.

double star alliance will have in sep-port the principal members of the Joseph Jefferson Company, which is kept intact between the autumn and spring tours of the "Dean of the American Stage." The theatre-goers of this city will undoubtedly witness the best high-class comedy presentation ever shown here, when one takes into consideration that this organization in support of the above stars is the same that appeared in all of the larger cities with Joseph Jefferson, Sr. The enterprise has the sanction and good will of the acknowledged "dean of the profession" who wishes the name of Jefferson to grow to posterity and be honored. "The Rivals" will be seen at the Faurot on April 4.

Cincinnati pianist has equipment of great artist, says Wilson G. Smith.
Van der Berg, the copper little pianist giant from Cincinnati assaulted Parnassus at the Chamber of Commerce Friday evening and achieved a notable victory. The unanimous sentiment of those who heard the musical conflict was "banzal." The technical achievements of this pianist are but little short of the marvelous. His moods range from the fury of a tempest to the sighing of an aeolian harp. His tonal climaxes are worked up with tremendous effect.
Anon he carresses the keys with the delicate touch of a summer zephyr.

The more I hear of Van der Berg, the more I am impressed with his pianistic greatness, and he shows constant improvement and development.
I fail to see where he does not rank with the best of the imported birds of passage. To my mind and taste, he sings fully as sweetly and brilliantly.
Van der Berg has the subtle sentiment of the poet, and the impetuous fury of a titan. When he keeps all of his latent energy and fire stored is the query. His playing of the Chopin polonaise op. 53, and the Liszt transcription of Mendelssohn's "wedding march," recalls to mind the colossal performances of them by Rubinstein. And his reading of the Beethoven sonata was full of vitality and the true Beethoven spirit. The noble theme of the "adagio" was sung by his supple fingers with the effect of an organ tone.

By a strange coincidence, I have heard Rubinstein play this rarely played sonata, and Van den Berg's interpretation suggested again Rubinstein's redoubt. Van den Berg's program was a heavy one, taxing to the utmost both his powers of endurance and his versatility of interpretation. To say that he was fully equal to the occasion is but stating the artistic fact. The pianist showed his artistic spirit by including among his numbers two compositions by his Cincinnati colleagues. They were a "scherzo" by Elsenheimer, and a nocturne by Corns. Both compositions were well worth the hearing and received highly sympathetic interpretation at the hands of the pianist. One does not often find such pianists of such breadth of mind that are willing to exploit the compositions of local competitors. This fact only accentu-ates the artistic caliber of Van den Berg's temperament.

He has both the technical and mental equipment of a great artist, and the time is surely coming when his name will be writ in large capitals.
All he needs is the opportunity to show his unusual artistic worth. I regret that the audience was not larger, since such recitals are rare, and they possess a high educational value. That there are so few professionals and music students attendant upon piano recitals has always impressed me as peculiar. To me, under such conditions, it is small wonder that our musical standard needs elevating.

I confess it to my shame that I know of no city of similar importance where so little interest is manifested among professional musicians in piano and song recitals. Evidently we have attained the musical Virgins, or else do not care to be reminded of our insignificance. Personally I am glad to be reminded of the many things ahead of me in the pursuit of art. It stimulates one and punctures the egotistical bubble that is prone to inflate, whether one wills it or no.
But to revert to Van den Berg—I hope that we may in the near future,
have the opportunity of hearing him in connection with the Cincinnati Orchestra. I can imagine what an impelling and inspiring performance he could give us of the Liszt of Tschakowsky concertos. He has the breadth of style and necessary technic

For either of these stupendous compositions.

With a cleverly constructed plot
and worked out with an elaboration of detail that has required an immense amount of work the sensation at melodrama, "The James Boys in Missouri" comes here in a few days and will offer theatre-goers an opportunity of viewing the most remarkable stage pictures and one of the most exciting and interesting performances ever seen in this city.
The recital of the deeds of these famous outlaws furnishes the theme for a play which has crowded every theatre in which it has been produced. The career of these picturesque bandits is depicted from the time of the Civil War until the death of Jesse James at the hands of Bob Ford. The comedy parts introduced are of a re-financed nature and never bolsterous or suggestive.

Oberammergau.
Sweeter than the poems of Longfellow, more interesting than the work of Stenkwitz is the story of Oberammergau as told in drama performed in the little hamlet each decade of years. In this wonderful story the real life of the simple peasants of the little Bavarian village enters into the seriousness of their own deep natures. Their daily lives are pure and simple and their portrayal of the characters in the play is a duty held by them as sacred. These performances at Oberammergau have attracted many thousands of Americans to the little Bavarian village and each one who witnesses the play, comes away deeply impressed with what he has seen. Mr. Ellsworth has witnessed the play many times. He is conceded to have the finest collection of views of the play, players, village, people and surrounding scenery in the world, and many of his views were obtained only through the courtesy of the committee in charge of the play and have been copyrighted. His lecture is a story that is not only interesting but entertaining—a story that, as told by him leaves an impression that is not soon forgotten. Mr. Ellsworth will appear at the Faurot opera house Sunday afternoon and evening, March 26, under the auspices of the Lima Acle of Eagles. An augmented orchestra, twenty choir singers and cathedral chimes will be introduced.

Costumes Designed for the Race Meets in and Near Paris Potend the Summer Modes.

A SIMPLE DESIGN FOR AFTER-NOON WEAR.

The lighter tints are among the newer favorites, and this Parisian example in primrose silk warp henrietta shows many admirable features of the newer modes. The gown is intended to be worn without a wrap. The bodice is fashioned over a fitted lining, and has bretelles of folds of the cloth edged with a fancy guipure braid in shells and gold, and a plastron in front with collar of broderie anglaise on a creamy linen batiste. The girle from taille française of the exact shade of the henrietta, rounds up high in the back and descends with a marked and graceful slope to the dip in front which marks the late fashions. The sleeve is a full and wrinkled gigot, with just three strappings of the guipure braid at the wrist. The skirt is fashioned with tablier front, plain and unadorned, and sides deeply pleated over the hips; the pleats stitched down to insure smoothness of fit. Three closely pleated rows of silk ribbon serve to conceal the joinings of the circular flounce portions, which extend from the knee downward, and make the circular flare of the skirt, which shows the new length, with straight train in the back.

A GOWN FOR THE RACES.

One of the new shades of violet blue—more blue than purple—is used in a charming finished model for this gown, designed to be worn to the races. The little coat is upon blouse lines, fastening close below the throat where the stitched straps seem to draw the blouse away to display the plain vest of the cloth beneath. These straps end at the belt with handsome buttons, and this same belt, a narrow one, tops the very full and rippling basquines that end in a full-fluted point in the back. The sleeve is a very full model, two bouffant puffs of the cloth being separated by upstanding cuffs, each ruffled with yellowish Valenciennes, and the light lower portion assuming mosquito-like wrinklings. The skirt is somewhat plain, circular in cut, and with stitched-down pleats in front and sides released below the hip curve to flare smartly at the foot.

SMART AND MODISH TRAVELLING COSTUME.

There is a delightfully attractive air to this simple coat and skirt costume intended for coaching, motorizing or general travelling wear. The material is a men's tweed in a very light gray, with hair line of a darker tint. The coat is one of the novel wholeback loose design that, nevertheless, are so cleverly cut that they more than suggest the lines of the figure in the underarm seams. There is a loose vest effect in a moleskin gray cloth, edged and stitched in white, and this mounted with a collar effect of the tweed well up to the dress collar in the back. The patch pocket and the sleeve cuff are all and faced with white, narrow velvet of the moleskin tint, making a clever contrast on the edges. The skirt is full circular in cut, with deep pleats stitched down in panel fashion and the fullness further increased with the insertion of triangular goss of white cloth either side of the front, these reappearing in the same position in the back.

SILK FOR THE SUMMER PEDESTRIENNE.

There is nothing, except the mohairs and sticliennes, that can compare with the novel toilette for walking and outdoor costumes generally. The silks are light in weight, cool and comfortable, and if they are, per haps, not so lasting or durable as are the mohairs, they at least have the merit of an ultra chic and smartness. That smart little blouse model in which the Parisienne pins her constancy in things sartorial is one of the best of the holdover modes. In a changeable taffetas rousant of a bluish cast the blouse is deeply pleated at the shoulders, to drop into a belt that heads a smart little rippit basquine an oblong buckle seeming to fasten the belt in the front. The skirt is arranged almost upon redugate lines, two broad box pleats occupying the front, and double box pleats being placed in the back. The modes are circular in cut and fitted with dart-shaped tucks over the hips, and falling in full folds from there. The gown is cut to clear the ground all around and display just the tip of the shiny black leather shoe.

A GOWN FOR THE RACES.

SMART AND MODISH TRAVELLING COSTUME.

SILK FOR THE SUMMER PEDESTRIENNE.

A NOVEL DESIGN FOR SILKEN GOWN.

That this is to be a silken summer there is not a vestige of doubt. The new weaves are unobtrusive and full plaid patterns, with coin spots, polkadots and discs of various sizes scattered in a hit-or-miss pattern over the plaided surface. The model illustrated is in the new shade of bronze green, a small check being crossed with a satin plaid of a darker tint; the whole showing a velvet disc in the deepest tint of this coloring scattered at close intervals. The bodice is extremely simple, showing modified blouse lines all around, and with the fashionable deep dip at the front. There is a lingerie vest and collar inserted, the broad shoulder is pleated and made to extend over the sleeve by means of piped straps, these stiffened with a princess haircloth, rather than with canvas, so that they do not crush when a coat or wrap is drawn over the gown. The sleeve is a double puff, each having a ruffle of haircloth on the lining, and a plain tight sleeve appears below the elbow, finished with a scalloping at the hand. The skirt is somewhat intricate in design, pleated gores being cut short at irregular intervals to admit shirred dounce effects, piped strappings heading each such insertion. The smooth fit over the hip is apparent, and the width at the hem is well over 10 yards.

Cold Water for Stains.

Cold water can do no harm to any material that is washable. It will often remove stains better than any other agent, and should be given the first chance, unless in a case where it is known that it has no power on the stain, or that it is not so good as some other agent. It should always be used for blood stains, meat juices, white of egg or other albuminous substances.

"Le sport" has taken full and complete possession of the fashion. Not having any equivalent word of their own, the French have borrowed the title from the English direct and without change, and now it is "le costume de sport" that leads all the rest of the roster of fashions.

The season at the much-lauded Riviera being over, the fair Parisienne, for a part of the year, at any rate, betakes herself northward, and the race meetings in and around Paris make a delightful field for the display of her new costumes and millinery.

Not to be interested in outdoor sports is to acknowledge one's self entirely outside the smart set in all classes of society. Racing has always been the sport par excellence of the aristocracy, and what is countenanced and followed by the classes is sure to be taken up by the masses. So it is quite the correct thing to be seen at the races, and the daily journals recount the number of fashionables present at each meeting, what they wore, where they went and who were in and of the party.

So it is that gowns and costumes are especially designed by the arbiters of the mode to be worn in these smart surroundings. Alladi may fare forth to les courses either in her own coach and four, in her auto, or, if she does not like to encounter the dust of the road, she goes quietly by train. But, no matter how she gets there, her own care is to make an absolute perfect picture in her surroundings when she does arrive.

It is the modes of the demi-tailleur that prevail at these smart meetings. The plain and severe tailor-made is adopted by those few who subscribe to the furor Anglais, as they term anglomania in France. But these, it must be confessed, are few and far between, for the Parisienne of high degree spends a mighty sum annually upon her gowns, and she very pardonably likes her gowns to justify their cost. So it is that what has come to be known as the demi-tailleur is what is best accepted of the Parisienne, for dear to her heart is just that touch of frilliness, fussiness and dressiness which the plain and severe mode so painfully lacks.

Silk, chiffon broadcloth, the chiffon finches in sticlienne and mohair, the thin checks and the unobtrusive plaids are among the very latest expressions of the mode. There is simply no one mode or fabric which can be said to prevail at the expense of another, and it is simply that—with in a certain range, of course—one's individual preference or fancy may be indulged without resulting in a gown that is in any way at all demode or passe.

Chic, indeed, are those charming racing toilettes, and they must embody the smart modishness of a gown to be worn on the lawn and at the club house, and yet be practical enough to stand the journey back and forth for the smartest and most fashionable of the courses—Auteuil,

A NOVEL DESIGN FOR SILKEN GOWN.

How to Teach Children to be Neat.

It is difficult, as everyone who tries it knows, to teach children to keep their belongings in order or to be careful and neat; but when once the habit of neatness is inculcated it is of incalculable value to the boy or girl in his or her future life and well worth all the trouble incurred. An ingenious mother thought out an excellent plan. She made it an inalterable rule that there should be a place for everything and everything kept in its place. Whenever any of the family found anything belonging to another member of it out of place they were at liberty to put it in "lock." The chamber was a room kept locked and presided over by the mother. Every article entering there called for a ticket to effect its release. At first cups, slates, pencils, slippers came tumbling in, and following them the money for release, and these formed a fund for purchasing something to promote tidiness—such as waste-paper baskets, paper racks, slipper cases and so on. Soon, by firmly adhering to the rule of demanding the ransom money, the articles coming to the room decreased, and the lesson was thoroughly taught to all the children, from the oldest ones away at college to the little maid of four years of age at home and mother's "right hand." Outside the door there hung a slate with a pencil attached, and when any article was confiscated the date was noted.

A certain time fixed for their delivery was a wise forethought, for if the little articles or toys must remain in "lock" three or four days or a week their little owners will think more of being deprived of their treasures than even of paying the necessary five cents to release them; and the toy comes out again with a certain freshness that makes it doubly attractive.

Both parents should always remember that they must set a good example, and the servants should always be instructed to remember neatness as absolutely imperative. Children are very quick at detecting inconsistencies and would notice at once the fact that their elders were not practicing what they were so sternly preaching.

Chantilly and the rest—are all of them several miles from the fashionable parts of Paris.

There are some charming designs that show a loose coat over a very full skirt. These new coats are totally unlike the loose models that we have deemed so fashionable hitherto. There is a straight, whole back, the fronts are turned back in reverse to display some sort of a loosely fitting vest, and the side seams are so cleverly cut that they rather more suggest the dainty curves of the figure. These smart coats come just about to the curve of the hips, and some of the most fascinating of them have the sleeve but to the elbow or a little below it, so that the sheer or a dainty cuff of the lingerie blouse worn beneath is displayed to advantage. Others, again, show the half-sleeve with a lingerie undersleeve, full and loose and fluffy, that may be buttoned into place or omitted, just as taste or caprice may dictate. After this loose coat those eminently smart little blouses are next in the affections of the modish. In the United States the blouse coat is in some quarters deemed more or less passe, but in Paris, that home and birthplace of fashions and things fashionable, it more than holds its own in the place of things approved by the powers that regulate what we should wear and what discard.

In its very newest expression this fascinating blouse is arranged to emphasize the straight front. One smart model has the blouse fastened over the chest and then pulled away to either side to display this vest, the fullness being drawn down into a very narrow belt without any sagging or bagging, and the belt just coming in either side of the vest, stopping short there, with a big, smart button on either side. The short Blon model, too, retains all of its hold upon the somewhat capricious affections of Madame La Mode. Now, however, it has taken to it all a chaste, refined, and embellished with much interesting and elaborate detail. It is all of it that, of course, and this tops a position back, which sometimes extends in lacquered shape, well to the front. Where the skirt would be if they were present to actually the stopping point for the skirt and this makes for the skirt effect, which is absolutely imperative in the front of the skirt and the coat alike.

The new skirts are managed either in a full circular cut—so full that it must be pleated to set snugly over the hips and have a haircloth lining some 10 or 12 inches deep to sustain the swirling fullness around the foot—or else they are constructed in tiered sections, the full edge of the lower joined to the straight edge of the upper, and strappings, pleatings, cuffs, folds, bouffants, in fact, any style of trimming that one may fancy, being cleverly used to cover the joining.

And all of these new skirts are long and accept only the distinctly pedestrian style. This alone of all the new modes clears the ground; the others lie anywhere from an inch in front to 12 inches in the back flat on the floor.

That Fascinating Separate Bodice.

Exquisite Designs for Drawing Room and Boudoir Wear.

So far from the separate bodice being a thing of the past, as so many of the fashion chroniclers would have us believe, never before in all of its history has it reached such a high level of perfection and so many admirers.

From early morning to the dawn of the morning after it is an incessant play. As a coffee jacket it decks the "eyes-openers" of strong coffee in bed or in the boudoir. Here it is in the bosom, and fluffiest variety, can be placed, according to the fashion of the moment, of alternate strips of ribbon and lace, and except for the yoke across the shoulder absolutely innocent of fitted lines or guise. An open throat and a loose flowing sleeve, often it comes only to the elbow, or if it should extend below this, it is slit on the inner seam so that the white soundness of the arm is displayed.

In the form of the lingerie blouse there is absolutely no limit to its extravagance. The finest and sheerest of handwoven handkerchief linen is deemed none too good for its making; and all of the filmy real laces go to its adornment. That it simply must be made by hand is now so well understood that to mention this fact seems superfluous. And not only are the real laces used with a lavish hand, but the most fine and exquisite of hand embroideries executed upon the fabric itself are called upon to supplement its dainty appearance, and incidentally add much to its cost.

The real Valenciennes, fine Cluny, Alencon and all of the Brussels laces are in high vogue for these; and the exquisite Irish laces—the Limerick, Carrickmacross, Mountmellick, not to speak of the exquisitely fine Irish crochings—are in great demand. The Irish laces have this one point of merit, and that is they are seldom or never copied in machine-made imitations. This alone would make them favored of those who, while they are willing to pay the extremely high prices demanded for these exquisite wares—what Dame Fashion smiles upon and Madame La Mode always takes an upward tendency in monetary value—are not willing to give it for something that can just as well be obtained in the imitation. The machine production which anyone may purchase for as many cents the yard as the real commands dollars, here, perhaps, is the secret of the vogue of these Irish productions which, up to the present, have never been successfully imitated by mechanical process; one can tell at a glance the real from the imitation.

The new lingerie blouse follows the collarless style. Indeed, to such an extent does this mode prevail that many of them will be said to be almost decollete. The square, or Dutch neck, as so many term it, is quite a favorite, and the lace edges this simplicity, no fullness appearing at this point. Others are furnished with a little chemise to be tucked in when desired; and undersleeves are often made in suite with this, so that the low neck and half sleeve may be varied according to occasion or caprice.

The surprise mode is really quite a temptation to dispense with the collar altogether. The line of the throat the past few weeks a "shoe club" along the same lines has been organized, and now comes the "theatre club." The "theatre club" is composed of ten young men who belong to the same "set." They do not earn enough money to be able to afford to take their girls to the high-priced "shows" next week. The plan is to meet once a week and each contribute 50 cents to the general fund. They then draw numbers from a hat, and the two who draw numbers 5 and 10 divide the $5 and take their girls to the theatre. No member is permitted to use the money two weeks in succession. If he draws a lucky number the second time in succession he gives it to another member, usually one who has been unfortunate in the drawing. The club has been in existence several weeks, and results have been satisfactory. Of course, the girls don't know about the scheme.—Kansas City Times.

At Van Wert.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Tucker were in attendance at the closing dance of the Colony dancing club at Van Wert on Tuesday evening and were guests of honor at a dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gleason.

Podio Party.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Binkley, on is so exquisitely and yet so modestly displayed in this connection that one does not think at all of a decollete effect when this is done.

Of course, the very latest fad and fashion in sleeves appear in these charming concepts. Single puffs, double puffs, leg-of-mutton designs, as well as the familiar and well-tried shirt sleeve of varying degrees of fullness, all of these are in good standing. Only the cuff is deeper and more elaborate than before. That is the sole change. The new cuffs have a little leatherbone "un" in top and bottom, just the narrowest cording, this serving to hold the shape, and coming through the laundry without cracking or breaking, a fault that even the least fussy must find with whalebone whether employed split or whole.

But it is in its guise as a dinner or an evening jacket that the separate bodice reigns supreme. For dinner wear they are fashioned of rich brocades—they must all show more or less prominent touch of metal, gold or silver threads in the design—or else of the exquisite chiffon velvets. The accompanying skirt must be of a chiffon broadcloth (this for dinner wear solely) or silk of almost any weave, or satin or velvet or brocade, only, and this is imperative. It must contrast with and not match the bodice jacket.

In these the shoulder is broad, the sleeve extremely full, but ending its billowy career at or above the elbow. The fronts are turned back in revers to display an exquisite chest, and this is ruffled quite in the old-time style with real laces. One might take the portraits of "Le Grand Monarque" as inspiration for these exquisite concoctions; for it is the coat of the gentlemen of these periods rather than the gowns of the women that are copied for fair femininity of today.

The little basque that goes with this coat is just as short or just as long as the figure of the wearer determines or her fancy dictates. The slender girl will be sure to order these large pocket flaps on the hips; but her more generously developed sister would far better honor those of the omission.

And to be in keeping with the extravagance which is the motif of these evening jackets, the buttons must be exquisite specimens. There are some old paste designs which are pretty nearly worth their weight in gold, and some enameled buttons which exceed them in cost. Cui silver, nello, jeweled and cameo buttons are all in the extreme of the mode, and it is a uncommon thing to have the buttons—they come in matched sets—cost even more than the jacket itself, irrespective of the cost of the real laces that go so far toward its adornment.

For evening wear there are some exquisite modes which have the fronts and sides only to the waistline—of course, there is that smart point in front—and the back extends in full sash-like breadths quite to the hem of the skirt. This is a mode that goes gaily with lace or gauze skirts—and they must be well distended with haircloth or featherbone at the hem—and is equally becoming to the petite and piquante beauty as to her tall and stately Junoesque sister.

Thursday evening entertained a party of friends, complimenting Mrs. Sadie Hiltendorf, of Toledo. Progressive pedro was played, followed by a several course lunch.

Eighty-Seventh Birthday.

Wednesday was the eighty-seventh birthday of Mr. James Satterthwaite, one of Lima's oldest and respected citizens. To do honor to the occasion about twenty-four old time friends and neighbors called informally during the evening. Games were played and altho' Mr. Satterthwaite was too feeble to take an active part, he moved himself about in his portable chair and watched the games or enjoyed the conversation. A most excellent supper was served and a shower of good wishes offered the host. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Overly, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Williams, Mr. and Mrs. James Gillespie, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Lacey, Mr. and Mrs. M. Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. Bessie, Mr. and Mrs. Orley Bessie, Mrs. Shaffer, Mrs. Barrett, Miss Celia Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Kirk.

Henry Distin, the inventor and maker of hand instruments for the Henry Distin Mfg. Co., at Williamsport, Pa., is probably the most active old man in Philadelphia to-day. He writes from 1411 S. 9th street, Philadelphia, Pa.:

"I write to inform you that I had a bad attack of la grippe last December which lasted more than three months, and which left me with catarrh, and several of my friends advised me to try your wonderful medicine, Peruna."

"I began with a bottle the first week in March and it certainly did me a great deal of good."

"I was so well satisfied that I purchased another bottle, and followed your directions which you furnish with every bottle, and I am glad to say that it has cured me. I shall certainly recommend the Peruna to all my friends."

.....AMUSEMENTS.....

Tonight, "Jesse James."
Monday, "Girls Will Be Girls."
Wednesday, "The Girl From Kay's."
Friday, "The Denver Express."
Saturday, "The Real Widow Brown."

The Van Dyke & Eaton company will close a most successful week's engagement tonight with the great sensational western drama, "Jesse James."

This is one of the few, the very few, sensational dramas of merit. From a historical standpoint it is as nearly authentic and correct as it is possible to write an actable play around the many episodes in the lives of these notorious outlaws. The action of the play beginning before the James Boys became outlaws, and gives the true reason for their embarking on the road to revenge and retaliation, which finally made them outlaws and criminals. It follows their lives through many experiences, hair-breadth escapes, robberies and dare-devil undertakings to the death of Jesse at the hands of Bob and Charley Ford, and the pardoning of Frank at Jefferson City by Governor Crittenden. The action is rapid and dramatic at all times yet not overdrawn or unnatural. The comedy element is laughable and at times excruciatingly funny, and yet at all times the story and action is intensely interesting and pleasing and thoroughly wholesome.

Al Leech, the star of "Girls Will Be Girls" company, that plays an engagement here on Monday night at the Faurot opera house, just thirty-two years ago, February 25th last, first saw the light of day in Wheeling, West Virginia, and when only seven years of age started in life to earn his own livelihood. He commenced by being a newsboy and followed that occupation until he was fourteen years of age, after which he started to work in a mill factory in his native town, and continued on until he was nineteen, when a crowd happened to come along and struck the town, they being in want of talent for the concert side show. Dan Lemon, the proprietor of the Lemon circus, inquiring around the public resorts to find out if he could secure some talent he was informed of Leech and his ability as being a very excellent comic singer and good dancer. He sought him out and engaged him after quite a line of argument, as Al was loath to accept, he being of a very nervous temperament and not feeling as sure in his own mind as his friends were that he could fill the bill. Anyhow he accepted and made a great hit both with the management and the entire audience. He however, only stayed with the circus a short time, when he went with a minstrel company, from that he went into vaudeville where he became one of the most prominent headliners in the business. It was while he was doing this turn at Keith's Theatre in Boston that Mr. William A. Brady first saw Leech's very successful act. Brady waited for Leech after the show and in less than an hour from the time they met, Brady had Leech's signature to a three years' contract. When Leech returned to the theatre that evening the news had arrived there before Leech. Mr. Albee, Keith's manager, sought him out in his dressing room and offered Leech and his three Rosebuds a five years' contract at $800 per week. Leech had to decline on account of the Brady contract and this is how Leech advanced from a newsboy to the most prominent star in the musical comedy world.

The wonderful business that is being done by Leech and his company in the comedy "Girls Will Be Girls" goes to prove the shrewdness of William A. Brady as a theatrical manager, and is undisputed from the financial point of view for every attraction he owns is playing to capacity houses throughout the entire United States.

Sure Relief for Women.

No. 18 Central Ave.
New Haven, Conn., April 24, 1904.

Eighteen months ago I was so completely run down that my body ached from head to foot. My back seemed to break in two and I suffered intense pain in the lower abdomen. I could not attend to my work and take a rest, and no medicine helped me any.

A friend told me how much Wine of Cardui had helped her and advised me by all means to take it. The day I took the first dose the severity of my health began. It was nearly three months before I was entirely cured, but at the end of that time I was in better health than I had been for seven years.

I look on Wine of Cardui as the most blessed medicine that a woman could possibly take when she is sick and tired of life.

Anna Nelson
CHICAGO, WINDSOR CHATELAIN CLUB.

WINE OF CARDUI

Mrs. Nelson describes the condition of thousands of women. That condition comes by slow stages. Usually the important function of menstruation is at first slightly irregular. Then comes the painful periods. Bearing-down pains and ovarian inflammation follow. Finally the nervous system gives way and the whole system has become affected and the pains rack the body from head to foot.

Wine of Cardui is a menstrual regulator of established reputation. No woman who takes it suffers as Mrs. Nelson suffered. It gives speedy and complete relief from the torturing menstrual agonies which are making so many women invalids today. Do not let yourself come to the pitiable condition Mrs. Nelson describes.

Secure a bottle of Wine of Cardui from your druggist today and begin treatment immediately.

and merely as a prologue to a story dealing with San Francisco society in its most alluring aspects at a period when millionaires sprang up daily as mushrooms do, and sank into oblivion as rapidly as a stick from an exploded skyrocket. In an environment like this which permits and invites opportunities for a succession of dramatic incidents and crisp dialogue a story of sturdy integrity and pathos is woven so that the play is calculated to please widely varying tastes.

The management of the company says: "Joseph Jefferson's two sons, namely Joseph Jefferson, Jr., and William W. Jefferson, are allied and are worthy representatives of the Jefferson name, and have succeeded their father as stars to the organization. It first happened in Pittsburgh, Pa., on November 20th, 1898, when William W. Jefferson was called upon to play Bob Acres in "The Rivals," on account of the illness of the elder Mr. Jefferson. That he succeeded is now a matter of theatrical history, and he has been playing the part ever since with great success. The Pittsburgh, Pa. Times, a representative newspaper of that city, at the time had the following to say of his performance:

"He shows his father in every movement, off the stage as well as on. The clothes he wears in the play are those his father wore, and not even the shoes required alteration. The fit is perfect."

The other son, but the eldest of the two Joseph Jefferson, Jr., will play the same part here, Sir Lucius O'Trigger, that he has always played with his father's company. Mr. Jefferson, Jr., is said to be the most excellent Sir Lucius O'Trigger since the death of W. J. Florence. This

"The Denver Express" will be the attraction at the Faurot opera house for next Friday night. The play is not a railroad play as its title implies, but a concise and beautiful story written in a kindred vein to "Arizona" which has just completed a phenomenal run in Chicago. There are elements of human pathos, wit, satire and a weaving in of a home like human story which appeals strongly to city audiences, who rapidly grasp the fact that the play is skillfully constructed on such lines as to remove it entirely from the category of the usual melodrama. Its originality of dialogue, breezy situations, together with the clever disposition of various powerful dramatic situations which arise, are as refreshing as the cool wind from the snowy summits of the Colorado mountains when evening comes, and the author's story of the great plains is an extremely beautiful one. The criticism of a contemporary whose opinion is well worth considering. Frontier life is depicted void of the usual blood and thunder accompaniments.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

We don't put Scott's Emulsion in the class of advertised cure-alls; it doesn't belong there. We hardly like to use the word "cure" at all, but we are bound to say that it can be used for a great many troubles with great satisfaction. Its special function is to repair the waste of the body when the ordinary food does not nourish, and this means that it is useful in many cases which are indicated by wasting.

We'll send you a sample free.

Lima Pork Packing Co.,
Sued for Big
Damages.

Loosing the use of the thumb of his left hand while engaged in cleaning a sausage machine for the Lima Pork Packing company, has led Casper Billing, a former employee of that company, to institute proceedings against them asking for big damages.

Russell Armstrong alleged that the injury was received through negligence of the company and asks for damages in the sum of five thousand dollars. The accident he claims came about while inserting into the sausage machine a large spiral piece of iron, commonly called aworm, the machine was connected with the mu-tive power by a tight belt. While removing an obstruction from the interior of the machine the engine was started by the orders of the foreman and his hand was caught and crushed so badly that he has entirely lost
the use of his thumb on the injured member.
